dormakaba – keylink: the way to a flexible mechanical masterkey system

dormakaba

Date: Friday, May 19, 2017
Time: 14:30–16:00
Place: meeting room Cracow

Programme:
Kaba keylink – the way to a flexible master key system
Peter Gissing

When planned with keylink, master key systems are finally adaptable and expandable. Where up to now conventionally planned key systems could be hardly changed or only with great effort, in systems planned with keylink organisational changes no longer present problem. And that with little organisational effort and low costs, as the lock cylinders no longer need to be replaced.

Interesting partners solution – second life of own key in MKS
The lost of a group key in a mechanical master key system does not matter anymore. Now there is a simple solution on the market which allows the recoding of the concerned cylinders with a minimum of effort. The group key is replaced, own keys remain the same and need not be changed.

Kaba mechatronic cylinder
Peter Arbeiter

Combined mechanic and electronic cylinder bridge the gap between electronic access control and the world of mechanics. The cylinder checks if the mechanic and the electronic part of key are allowed. Fitted with a chip, Kaba keys can control mechanic and mechatronic cylinders and electronic components within the whole system. Keys can be quickly programmed in and out, lost keys are blocked electronically.

Kaba evolo smart
Peter Arbeiter

Modern electronic access control solution to easily manage the doors. No requirements on any extra hardware to program the locking components, change access rights or cancel access authorisations. Now this is done quickly and simply with your smartphone.
